STRIVING TO EXCEL...

Dillard University Students Involved And Beyond

Striving to excel . . .

Do you hear us coming . . . tap, tap . . . step, step . . .

We the men and women of Dillard University, are marching in the army of success. We are fighting constant battles with unforeseen enemies called stress, procrastination, and fatigue. We are climbing Mt. Academia, slipping occasionally, but holding on sternly to each rock of knowledge. When we rise to the top, we will proudly raise our torches of wisdom.

We are striving to excel.
Tara T. Green

Not to equal . . .

Academically Excellent, Culturally Diverse, Community Oriented, Talented, Growing, and Goal Reaching . . . that is what I call the average Dillard University Student. Equalling someone else's goals, was once the main objective in our lives. Our new motto is "Why equal when you have the potential to excel". By grasping our inner strengths, holding onto goals and values already instilled, and opening our fresh minds to new and improved ideas we are able to do the unexpected, reach the impossible, and excel in life instead of equal.

Chaundria J. Harris

"EBONY BEAUTY

AT ITS BEST!!"

Why are young African-Americans so taken with Malcolm X as an icon and a leader?

They see a person who speaks honestly about a reality that hasn't changed so much. (They are) not looking to follow him because they understand you can't follow a dead man. But you can look at a person and learn, and I think that's what they're doing.

—Orlando Bagwell (as printed in Newsweek, Jan. 31, 1994)

Now that I have your attention, (sorry I had to trick you, but I knew that this would do it), I'd like to tell you about something that happened to me last year. Wanna hear it, here it go!! ...

Most of us, here at DU, have had to read the Autobiography of Malcolm X as told to Alex Haley. We've had to read it in an English Class or in history. Well, unfortunately, I didn't have those classes. I was going to read it though (Really, I was!). But guess what?!? The movie came out.

Hey, I thought, why not cram hours of reading into a three hour movie. So, some friends and I hopped the RTA (it's not just a ride, it's an adventure) and we went to "The PIT".

As we all know (or rather us unfortunates), the PIT shows movies after they've been out for a of Malcolm X, and I couldn't do it. I could not even remember hearing of Malcolm X.

I had heard about Dr. King, Harriet Tubman, Frederick Douglass, etc. All of these Black heroes, and I could not ever remember hearing of Malcolm X. I couldn't get over it.

Back at school, I was totally useless. I don't even remember how I got back to school that night. My mind (the 10% that I use) was occupied. No Vacancies!!

I couldn't even go to sleep that night. I kept wondering why was I in the dark about this man, his philosophies, his religion, his dreams, and his struggles. Why was I in the dark?

It was later on that night, early part of the morning, that I realized why. I didn't want to know. I had purposely pushed all this while. So, sitting in the theater (if you want to call it that), I had the misfortune to see the movie with people that had already seen it. I couldn't really enjoy the movie because they were talking through it.

So, sitting in the movie theater, thoroughly disgusted and ready to go, something flashed on the screen. I couldn't tell what it was, but to this day, I think it was something subliminal.

Well, anyway, from then on I was totally engrossed in the movie. I sat there watching, watching, taking it all in. When the movie was over, I was thinking, just thinking.

I was trying to recall, when in my school life, (which is all my life) had I heard truth, all this "light" into a dark void, way in the back of my mind. I like so many people had consciously shut out that part of life, a life filled with struggle and anguish. I didn't want to know about it, I didn't want to face it. I was a "coward" living in a lie, just like millions of other "African-Americans" around this U.S. of A., that had been passed on down through the generations.

... This darkness became a reality. The lie became my lie ...

Just by looking at a movie, by looking at a film of a man I had never and will never know, this lie, this darkness became a reality. The lie then became my lie. A lie that I had no idea what to do about.

So what did I do? What did I do to bring the lie that I called my life out of the darkness and into the light? I did what I had put off doing for so long. I took that first step of discovering truth. I read his story.

I read about this man and his life to see or at least try to see all that he saw. And as I read, the lie that had been hidden from me by me came more and more into focus.

I read about how a child that was born into a bad situation, became a hero amongst his own people at the time heroes were needed most. I read about a young boy who became a Man amongst men. I read about a disillusioned young man who became a dream to the dreamless and a light to the blind. I read about a man with no hope who brought new hope to the masses, to the hopeless.

I read about Malcolm X, a professor of truth, light, and wisdom. I read about this man, who exposed the lies we, as a people, had been living and still are living today.

I know my story is different from everyone else's, or maybe it isn't. My purpose of writing this story was not to preach to anyone, or try to convince anyone of something. All I ask is that as we remember and honor heroes of our past, of our present, and of our future, that we remember that young boy who became a Man, that we remember Malcolm X and honor his memory as a man whose message of truth shall be with us always. —"Mitch"

"... However much we may have differed with him—or with each other about him and his value as a man, let his going serve only to bring us together, now. Consigning these mortal remains to earth, the common mother of all, secure in the knowledge that what we place in the ground is no more now a man—but a seed—which, after the winter of our discontent will come forth again to meet us... And by in honoring him, we honor the best in ourselves..."

—Eulogy by Ossie Davis

"... Sometimes I have dared to dream to myself that one day, history may even say that my voice... helped to save America from a grave, possibly even a fatal catastrophe... And if I can die having brought any light, having exposed any meaningful truth that will help to destroy the racist cancer that is malignant in the body of America, then all of the credit due to Allah. Only the mistakes have been mine..."

—Malcolm X

"Black woman, without asking how, just say that we survived out forced march and travail through the Valley of Slavery, Suffering, and Death—there, that Valley there beneath us hidden by the drifting mist. Ah, what sights and sounds and pain lie beneath that mist! And we had thought that our hard climb out of that cruel valley led to some cool, green and peaceful, sunlit place—but it's all jungle here, a wild savage wilderness that's overrun with ruins.

But put on your crown, my Queen, and we will build a New City on these ruins."

The collage features numerous black and white photographs of students. In the top left, a young man in a suit jacket stands next to a young woman lying down. To their right, a student in a striped shirt works at a table. Further right, a couple poses for a portrait, and a student sits on a bench. The middle section includes a student holding a jacket, a group of students outdoors, and a student in a 'VILLARD UNIVERSITY' t-shirt. The bottom part of the collage shows a student in a 'WELCOME BACK' banner, a group of students in a hallway, and a large group of students posing together. A quote from Proverbs 3:5 is overlaid on the left side of the collage.

Nationally Syndicated Washington Post Columnist To Speak At Dillard University Honors Day

Dr. William J. Raspberry, award-winning columnist for the Washington Post, will address outstanding students of Dillard University at the Honors Convocation Thursday, April 14, at 11 a.m. in Lawless Memorial Chapel.

The program will recognize high-achieving Dillard students for their superior academic performance.

Raspberry is the author of a syndicated, urban affairs column that is now printed in 180 newspapers across the country. He is known for his independent of mind and enlightened opinions on social and political issues. His opinions are as a springboard.

DON'T QUIT

*When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low, and the debts are high
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest if you must, but don't you quit.*

*Life is queer with its twists and turns
As everyone of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up though the pace seems slow,
You may succeed with another blow.*

*Success is failure turned inside out,
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt,
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems so far;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit,
It's when things seem worse,
That you must not quit.*
